Request #13190 : Clarification needed on workers' "Minimum Accuracy"

Gianfranco Cecconi

Friday at 16:30

a) Why can't it be set to 100% and 99% is the highest possible value?

b) You write at <https://success.crowdfLOWER.com/hc/en-us/articles/202703305-Glossary-of-Terms> (<https://success.crowdfLOWER.com/hc/en-us/articles/202703305-Glossary-of-Terms>) that only trusted judgements are included in the results. But I have contributed to job 844305 as an internal contributor (worker id 34995103), have intentionally got my test question wrong (column "street_name_challenge") and my judgement *is* included in the results! I remember not being offered to do more tasks after that - which is what I wanted - but I expected my first judgement to be discarded from the results. What happened there?

Thanks.

Hi Gianfranco,

The accuracy setting is something on the back end that can't be changed, at least when speaking of the maximum accuracy. Still, 99% accuracy is going to get you the same results as 100% in terms of how many test questions contributors have to answer correctly (they can't answer 9.9 out of 10 questions correctly, it will round up to 10 anyway).

Job 844305 has no test questions and therefore no way to determine untrusted judgments, so all judgments will be included in the output data.

Regards,

Kirsten Gokay
